2) An order however should be issued that when complaints are referred to the police for investigation, a date should always be fixed for the report being submitted; and the court should see to it that the report is duly submitted or some proper explanation is given for the delay and should watch the progress of the case so as to see that it is disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

3) In case of complaints taken up by the police also, time should be fixed, and both the police officers and magistrates to whom 1st information report are submitted should watch progress and prevent all avoidable delay. The dates for investigation and report should be fixed and entered in the appropriate registers to enable the officers concerned to scrutinise the work from time to time.
